------------	-----------------------------

2001	A delightful talk in which Sangharakshita looks at his own poem 'Shripada', the translation of which gives the title. Evoking the more mythical side of his own spiritual quest, he challenges us in ours with a good humoured look at what it is to Go for Refuge to the Buddha and his teaching in the context of vibrant spiritual community. With concluding remarks by Kulananda.

197	The Six Distinctive Emphases of the FWBO

2002	In his first public appearance since his eyesight began to deteriorate, Sangharakshita begins this new talk with reflections on his blindness, displaying remarkable equanimity and humour in the process. His main subjects, however, are six particular aspects of Buddhist life and practice which are given distinctive emphasis in the spiritual movement he has founded. The talk concludes with a strong evocation of one of these – spiritual friendship – when Sangharakshita recalls his own personal friendship with the great Tibetan Lama, Dhardo Rimpoche.
